BUYING AT CHRISTIE'S

FROM ANCIENT TO MODERN A DISTINGUISHED PRIVATE COLLECTION

Eclectic, refined, contemplative, disciplined, dramatic, bold: these words evoke that connoisseur's treasure trove that revealed itself to those fortunate enough to be invited in. The private passion of one man – this remarkable collection reflects a collecting journey, inspired by scholarship and passion, that began in the 1950s and never drew breath. Faced with bare walls in a newly acquired family home, the touchstone for this Catholic ensemble was the acquisition of his very first painting – the beautifully observed panel depicting the Marriage at Cana by the Master of Belorado (lot 28); thus began a lifelong devotion to the pursuit of knowledge, scholarship and works of art from antiquity to the present day.

Masterpieces of painting, antique and modern sculpture, silver and more adorned the brushed-steel and mirrored walls of the house from the 1970s - and as you stepped over the threshold, you were confronted on arrival by outstanding moments from more than two thousand years of art history: a 3rd-century Roman mosaic, an Etruscan statue, a 15th-century Spanish altarpiece, bronzes by Henry Moore and Fernando Botero, a Coromandel lacquer Chinese screen, a 17th-century Spanish still life and a Persian rug - everything carefully placed for maximum effect, and dramatically lit at night.

At the heart of the collection were canvases by the greatest names of Spanish 17th-century painting: a monumental but deeply tender St Joseph with the Child by Murillo, an exemplary image of the charitable St Thomas of Villanueva by Zurburan, and a group of outstanding 17th-century Spanish still lifes by some of the most important exponents of that genre.

Despite a keen taste for the Baroque, the overall effect was never austere, and the outside world was let in by large windows bathing the collection in mellow daylight, overlooking rolling green lawns. The effect was further lightened by Rococo works from the 18th Century-including a joyous early canvas by Tiepolo showing the great painter of the Classical World Apelles, about to be rewarded with Alexander the Great's luscious concubine after falling for her while painting her portrait, as well as the luminous copper panel showing the Cantabrian Port of Bermeo painted by Luis Paret v Alcazar in 1783 - a composition that was subsequently copied in a pietra dura table top executed at Buen Retiro for the Royal Palace in Madrid.

Happily, for a few days at King Street in early December, having travelled to Mexico City and New York, we will all be given the chance to enjoy his remarkable and eclectic vision once more – before the works go out into the world again, hopefully serving as touchstones to new collectors.

Neil F. Phillips (1924-1997) collection. Property from the Estate of Neil F. Phillips, Esq., Q.C.; sold Christie's, New York, 18 December 1997, lot 304.

EXHIBITED:

British Museum, London, 1983-1989.

Neil Phillips was born in Montreal in 1924. He was interested in art and history all his adult life, which began at the early age of 18 when he joined the Royal Canadian Navy, serving on the HMCS Lethbridge from 1942-1945. Early on he recognized the global aspects of the post-war world and chose to pursue French-based and English-based law degrees from McGill University and Yale University. His 1952 book United States Taxation of Foreign Entities is still widely used.

Phillips developed a true "renaissance" enthusiasm for collecting. Although he had a natural instinct for beauty, he did not collect objects simply for the sake of their beauty, but rather, each work of art had to have a sense of history. This passion lead him into many fields of collecting, including European paintings, drawings and works of art, Chinese art, silver and coins, as well as antiquities. The spirit and scope of the Phillips collection recalls that of Henry Walters, founder earlier this century of the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore. Phillips generously shared his passion with others, as works from his collection were loaned to major museums, such as the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the British Museum.

Decorated with the arms of popes or cardinals, papal rings of the fifteenth century were made of gilt bronze or copper set with glass or crystal bezels, and distinguished by their great size. Their exact function remains a mystery, although it is thought they may have been given as credentials to an envoy from the pope or cardinal to the king, used as a sign of authentication for the wearer during their journey. Comparable papal rings are in the British Museum (inv. 1888,1201.3) and Victoria & Albert Museum (inv. 664-1871 and 667-1871).

EXHIBITED:

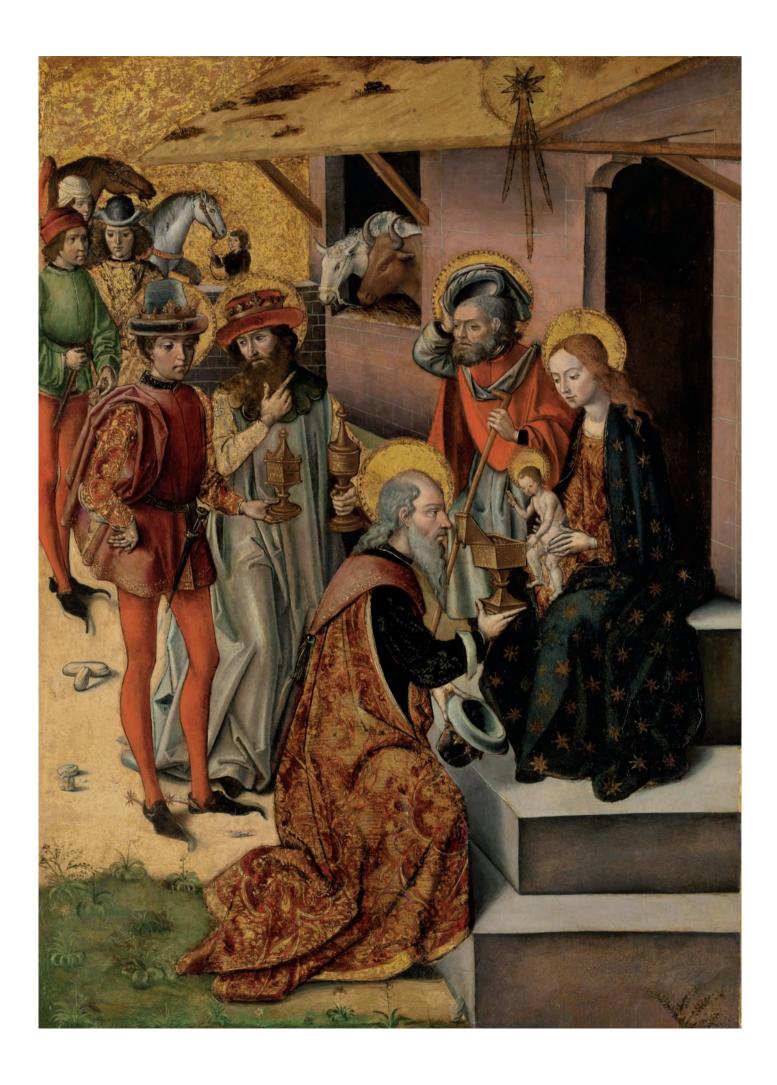

Paredes de Nava, Iglesia de Santa Eulalia, Pedro Berruguete. El primo pintor renacentista de la Corona de Castilla, 4 April-8 June 2003, no. 1.

Pedro Berruguete was a key exponent of the so-called 'Hispano-Flemish' style in Spain, and a leading figure in the artistic flourishing of the Iberian Peninsula during the fifteenth century. Berruguete probably trained somewhere in the Kingdom of Castile in northern Spain though little documentation survives to verify this. Indeed, little is known about his early career, but the publication of a (now-lost) document dated 1477 by the historian Luigi Pungileoni in 1822, referring to the work of 'Pietro Spagnuolo pittore' in Urbino, has provided a crucial piece of evidence about his life. During the 1470s, the Duke of Urbino, Federico da Montefeltro, launched a number of ambitious artistic projects across his palaces; redecorating his Urbino studiolo with a complex scheme of trompe-l'oeil intarsia panelling and a series of painted portraits of Famous Men (now Louvre, Paris and Galleria Nazionale delle Marche, Urbino); as well as commissioning seven larger paintings of the Liberal Arts (Music and Rhetoric, now National Gallery, London) for his summer palace at Castel Durante. For these ambitious decorative schemes he had employed the Netherlandish painter Justus of Ghent, also called Joos van Wassenhove, who had been summoned to Urbino by circa 1473-74 when he painted the Communion of the Apostles for the city's Confraternity of the Corpus Domini. Berruguete was apparently working in Urbino from circa 1475, and his hand has been identified in some of Justus' Famous Men, the compositions of which he later re-used after his return to Spain. Though the extent of his involvement in the projects has been debated, Berruquete's presence in Urbino seems certain and enabled him not only to hone his knowledge of Netherlandish painting, but also to see the work of great Italian masters like Piero della Francesca, who was also working in the Duke's employment.

The Adoration of the Magi is generally accepted as an early work by Berruguete, painted before his purported journey to Italy and a date of circa 1473-1475 would seem most likely. The sophistication of the style and composition in this panel shows that the artist was already a skilled and observant painter, even before his time in Urbino. From the 1440s onwards, painting in Spain had increasingly looked to the Netherlands as an arbiter of taste, artistry and technical brilliance. Paintings by artists like Jan van Eyck and Rogier van der Weyden were actively and avidly imported to Spain allowing local artists to study and copy Netherlandish examples, while journeys to Flanders, like that of the Aragonese court painter Lluís Dalmau from 1431, allowed painters to gain first-hand experience of the Netherlandish use of oil paint, which slowly began to replace egg tempera as a more painterly medium in southern Europe during the second half of the fifteenth century. Berruguete's Adoration provides further proof of the circulation of northern influences across the Mediterranean and its impact on artists working there. The composition of Berruguete's design possesses striking similarities with Martin Schongauer's engraving of the Adoration of the Magi of 1470-74 (fig. 1), which ultimately derived from Rogier van der Weyden's Columba Triptych of circa 1455 (Munich, Alte Pinakothek). This composition seems to have become relatively firmly entrenched in Spain by the 1480s with painters like Fernando Gallego continuing to use and adapt it as a model (Berruguete himself returned to the same composition for his Adoration in the Iglesia de Santa María in Becerril de Campos, Palencia). The popularisation of engravings and woodcuts during the second half of the fifteenth century increasingly allowed artistic designs to spread more rapidly across Europe (a phenomenon which peaked with the publication of Dürer's print series in the early 1500s). In the present work Berruguete copies, in reverse, the almost exact position of Schongauer's kneeling king, the Christ Child seated on the Virgin's lap, the young king wearing elegantly pointed shoes with large spurs, and the two figures in the royal entourage conversing in the background. Indeed, even the star, which shines low above the ruined roof of the stable is clearly an element which interested Berruguete and which he reused for his own composition.

$37,000-61,000 €34,000-56,000 King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella were great supporters of religion and the arts. The building of churches increased and artists were commissioned to decorate the new buildings with monumental altarpieces, statues and elaborate carvings for walls and facades. Many of the artists were from Flanders, a region which was also staunchly Catholic. Flemish craftsmen travelled to Spain to work in the expanded art market. The influence or handiwork of these travelling sculptors can be seen in the sharp chin, small mouth, thin-bridged nose and high, arching eyebrows of both both figures, often seen in work originating in Malines (see A. Huysmans, La sculpture des Pays-Bas méridionaux et de la Principauté de Liège, exh. cat., 1999, nos. 66-67, 71-74). Although Fernando Botero's sensual nudes transcend the two-dimensional limitations of the canvas, the monumentality of his figures is nowhere more fully appreciated than in his sculptural works. As Mujer Sentada (Seated Woman) demonstrates, it is in the powerful manipulation of plastic form that Botero's soft, sensual sitters gain their greatest weight. Indeed, though the voluptuous female form remains one of the artist's most emblematic subjects, it is in sculptural works such as these that the body most fully lends itself as a vehicle for the exploration of form. Thus, evidencing the perennial influence of the Italian Renaissance masters the artist so admired, Mujer Sentada (Seated Woman) goes beyond Michelangelo's corpulence, creating a playful visual reality that surpasses representational convention.

The Master of Belorado worked predominantly in the style of the Master of the Catholic Kings, identified as Diego de la Cruz, the leading painter in Castile during the early years of the sixteenth century. As with many Burgos retables (from which the present work would originally have come) the names of the most important figures, excepting Christ, have been inscribed within their haloes. The naturalistic background of the scene, with its arcade and servants pouring water into a line of large terracotta pots, is reminiscent of Juan de Flandes's version of the same scene in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, painted for Isabella of Castile circa 1500-1504.

This impressive panel has long been recognised as the work of a Spanish artist painting in the style of Juan de Flandes, a Netherlandish master documented working in the Iberian Peninsula from 1496 for Isabella of Castile who had a fundamentally important influence on Spanish art. The Master of Tejerina, probably identifiable with Juan Tejerina, is documented as working in Paredes de Nava, Palencia between circa 1515-1530. Here he would have had easy access to works by Juan de Flandes both at the Miraflores Charterhouse near Burgos and even in Palencia itself where Flandes had painted a Crucifixion for the high altarpiece of the city's cathedral (Madrid, Museo Nacional del Prado), in which the grieving women and horses of the centurions behind the Cross in that composition evidently had a strong influence on the St Ursula and her Virgins and mounted St Martin in the present work.

Growing up in Barcelona, Pablo Gargallo emerged from the same artistic heritage as his famed contemporary Pablo Picasso. Working in bronze and stone from the tender age of fourteen, like his fellow countryman, Gargallo was determined to discover a new sculptural medium that would not only rival the gravity and longevity of these revered, time-honoured materials, but one that would likewise come to symbolise the explorative nature of his avant-garde practice. To this effect, by 1907, the artist began working almost exclusively in iron, becoming particularly fascinated by the versatility of sheet metal which was at once both hard and soft, rigid and malleable. As Espagnole à la mantille (Version I) illustrates, Gargallo exploited the material possibilities of this new medium, layering thin, delicately shaped forms on top of another to create an unrivalled sense of three-dimensional volume and space.

A small devotional triptych in the Museo de Bellas Artes, Valencia, perhaps Nicolás Falcó's most famous work, shows the Virgin Lactans in the central panel with saints and an Annunciation across its wings, and bears a number of striking similarities to the present work. Its almost identical central subject, the similarly shaped top of the triptychs in which God the Father and the Holy Spirit appear and the brocade cloth-of-gold hangings behind the Virgin are all remarkably similar. Falcó is documented working in and around the city of Valencia during the sixteenth century for a number of public and private patrons. The small scale of the present work suggests that it was intended for private devotional use, and Post reports that it may have come from a convent at Albarracín near Teruel (op. cit., p. 366).

This tapestry belongs to a small group attributed to the region of Oudenarde, which all feature various real, mythological and imaginary beasts in dense foliage with a pergola, balustrade and steps framing the foreground. The effect is almost that of a stage set, although there is no obvious story. Another from the group featuring a griffin attacking a unicorn is in the Artesia Bank Collection, Belgium. A further two previously with French & Co., New York were sold anonymously, Christie's, London, 12 December 1985, lot 59 and are illustrated in I. de Meûter, M. Vanwelden, Tapiseries d'Audenarde du XVIe au XVIIIe siècle, Tielt, 1999, pp. 138-139.

Dürer's famous engraving (1515) of the first recorded female rhinoceros to arrive in Portugal as a gift from Sultan Muzafar II, ruler of Gujarat, is probably the most iconic image that was created, reproduced and disseminated of the exotic beast. His distinctive, yet inaccurate, depiction of an armour-plated beast with almost reptilian scaled legs resonated for centuries afterwards, until more naturalistic images began to take hold after the 'Dutch' rhinoceros toured the continent between 1741 and 1749. A similar pergola game park tapestry, also featuring a rhino, was offered anonymously, Christie's, London, 10 November 2005, lot 125.

Born in Santorcaz, Madrid in 1614, Juan de Arellano entered the studio of Juan de Solis at the age of sixteen where he trained as a figure-painter of modest success. However, by the time he reached his thirties, he had begun to concentrate predominantly on flower-pieces, eventually producing a repertory of different formats, including vases, baskets and garlands. This genre had been explored by Spanish artists of the previous generation, most notably by Juan van der Hamen y León (1596-1631) and Juan Fernández, called El Labrador (active 1629-1636), who both incorporated flowers into their still life paintings. However, it was not until the mid-seventeenth century (and in part due to Arellano) that flower-pieces became a specialist field in Spanish art and an integral feature of the decoration of homes and church interiors in Madrid.

Arellano was strongly influenced by artists from the Spanish Netherlands, such as Jan Brueghel the Elder (1568-1625) and Daniel Seghers (1590-1661), yet as his career progressed in the 1660s the Baroque style of the Italian artist Mario Nuzzi, called Mario de' Fiori (1603-1673), increasingly appealed to the artist. Arellano became the leading exponent of flower painting in the Golden Age of Spanish art, with Antonio Palomino stating that: 'none of the Spaniards surpassed him in eminence of this skill' (A. Palomino de Castro y Velasco, Las vidas de los pintores y estatuarios eminentes españoles [abridged from Volume 3 of El museo pictórico y escala óptica, Madrid, 1715-24], London, 1742, p. 105).

The present two works display several characteristic features of Arellano's style, particularly in the use of the primary colours red, yellow, and blue. These dominant hues are harmoniously balanced and offset through the chiaroscuro generated from the white highlights and dark background. Whilst Arellano typically produced pairs of works, Alfonso E. Pérez Sánchez (op. cit.) believed that these two pictures were only united in the nineteenth century when they were given identical frames, citing the slight differences between them and the disparity in their dimensions. Arellano typically signed his paintings, yet unusually the second of these pictures is also dated to 1665, marking it as an important and particularly illuminating work in the artist's oeuvre. The loose, liveliness of the first undated picture prompted Pérez Sánchez to suggest a slightly later date. He compared the porcelain vase in the picture to those in the two paintings in the Abelló collection, dated 1667 (Pérez Sánchez, ibid., nos. 33-34). In both of the present works, Arellano chose not to include the insects which are common in his early works and which also recur in the later pictures; rather, the focus remains on the multitude of different species of flowers. Uprights of this size are rare and these pictures exemplify the middle period of Arellano's oeuvre and particularly the influence of Mario Nuzzi with their drama, lively sense of movement, bold colours, and Baroque grandeur.

This example, with its highly carved and drilled decoration, is typical of capitals carved in Cordoba and nearby Medinat al-Zahra in the second half of the 10th century. Madinat al-Zahra was founded in 936 by Abd-al-Rahman III al Nasir, three miles northwest of Cordoba. According to the Arab biographer, Ibn-Khallikan (1211-1282), this royal residential city of the Umayyad dynasty contained 4,300 columns. There were major workshops producing such capitals in both cities, with craftsmen relying heavily on their trephine to produce such deeply carved floral motifs. They used abstract ornamentation to deliberately avoid confusion with Christian and Roman religious buildings, and yet the basic architectural vocabulary was derived from late antique forms.

Other examples with similar features can be found in Museo Arqueológico Provincial de Córdoba, Spain, (inv nos. 28.609 and 30.149), The Metropolitan Museum of Art (30.95.134), The Cincinnati Art Museum, Cincinnati, and Kuwait National Museum, Kuwait City (LNS 2 S).

The so-called 'Vicalavarda' was an attempted military coup, and popular uprising, that broke out during the reign of Queen Isabella II. It began in the town of Vicálvaro, near Madrid, on 28 June 1854 when Leopoldo O'Donnell, a Spanish general of Irish descent, led forces demanding an end to perceived corruption within the government. The coup attempt became known as 'La Vicalvarada', and although it failed, with O'Donnell and his troops retreating South, the Progressive movement did not lose momentum, issuing a manifesto in July 1854. These events marked the beginning of the bienio progresista, a two-year period (1854-56) that witnessed a great call for reform of the old political system. This picture would appear to be a satire on the Vicalvarada, and likely shows the two protagonists within the Progressive movement, O'Donnell and Baldomero Espartero, represented as the donkey and the fox.

Large scale figures like the above and lot 49 the bearded god, were produced in Southern Italy and Etruria predominately as votive offerings at sanctuaries. Their classical style of dress and facial features are remarkably reminiscent of Greek marble sculpture of the same period. For a comparable figure of a girl found in the Etruscan city of Capua and now in the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek (inv: HIM3) see T. Fischer-Hansen, Catalogue, Campania, South Italy and Sicily, 1992, pp. 164-165. Similarities between the two figures include the pose of the arms and the fine details to the folds of the drapery at the front and a smooth un-worked surface to the back. Murillo was one of the greatest artists of seventeenth century Spain. His fame rests not only on his sense of colour and light (which moved toward a paler and more restricted palette as he grew older), and his ability to luxuriate in the pure application of paint (something he must have learned from Titian and Rubens, whose work he would have seen in Madrid when he visited there in April to December of 1658), but also on his sure sense of composition. However, his greatest contribution to Baroque art was the shift he achieved from the strict interpretation of Catholic religious themes to an infinitely more sympathetic and human approach in his work. Nowhere in Murillo's oeuvre is this more evident than in the present Saint Joseph taking the hand of the Christ Child.

In an image essentially divested of narrative context. Murillo depicts a moment of familial tenderness - Saint Joseph gently holds the hand of the Christ Child as he presents Him to the viewer, both of their gazes engage us directly and unflinchingly. If the Council of Trent almost a hundred years earlier had declared Joseph nutritoris domini, a concept made obligatory by decree from Pope Gregory XV (Ludovisi) in 1621, it took an artist like Murillo to give the idea visualisation. Here, a strong and vigorous Saint Joseph, bearing a striking resemblance to the adult Christ, is presented as a model of parental authority both guiding and presenting the Christ Child, the paragon of filial obedience. The pair appear on a man-made plane - an incomplete stone pilaster to the left and a paved floor beneath their feet. However, as natural as Murillo makes his Holy family and the setting, their separation from the viewer is, nonetheless, maintained both by the glory of angels above as well as by the subtle nimbus of light which surrounds Christ's head and the halo on Saint Joseph's. The combination of the figures' tangible reality with a visionary other-worldliness made Murillo's interpretations of these isolated religious images immensely appealing and extremely popular.

The transformation of Saint Joseph's role in Catholic thought and art is an interesting one. Medieval theology held a somewhat precarious view of the Saint, something invariably reflected in the art it inspired. Concerns persisted that a younger looking Joseph would compromise the notion of the Virgin Mary's purity. In this way, imagery of Joseph increasingly portrayed him as an older man, always in a subsidiary, supportive role to his wife and Child. However, the spiritual developments of the sixteenth century gradually witnessed Saint Joseph become a more important figure in the Church, prompting a review of the way in which he was depicted in art.

The view of Joseph's vital role in Christ's childhood had been expounded by Ignatius Loyola in his Spiritual Exercises of 1548, and the idea that he acted as the earthly protector of the Virgin and Christ Child found particularly strong devotional support in Spain. The reform of artistic imagery which the Council of Trent propagated inspired authors like Gracián de la Madre de Dios to write tracts such as his 1597 Grandeza y excelencias del glorioso San José, which consequently influenced painters including El Greco in his Saint Joseph and the Christ Child before a view of Toledo painted for the Capilla de San José in Toledo (fig. 1; see El Greco of Toledo, 1982, pp. 164-68, fig. 95 and E. Mâle, L'Art Religieux après le Concile de Trente, 1932, pp. 313-325). The trend for undramatised depictions of saints, suppressing their often grisly martyrdoms, began to be understood as better conveying the mysteries of the Church and thus more likely to move the faithful to devotion. There was no one better in interpreting these new religious beliefs than Murillo.

Indeed, Murillo returned to depictions of St Joseph and the Christ Child numerous times throughout his career. These can invariably be divided into two groups: full length pictures where Joseph is usually shown tenderly holding the Child's hand, and more intimate half-lengths with Christ either sleeping or held in Joseph's arms (fig. 2). The softness and subtlety of Murillo's palette and style is perfectly matched with the tender nature of these works, and it is unsurprising that they formed such a popular commission for his patrons. The intimacy and charm of these paintings served to heighten the devotional impact of the works as patrons sought more personal expressions of faith.

A note on the provenance

Antonio Palomino (1655-1726), a working artist as well as a writer, records in his El Parnaso español pintoresco lauredo of 1724 that a Don Francisco Artier in Madrid owned five paintings by Murillo acquired from Don Juan Francisco Eminente. These pictures, each described as a 'marvel', consisted of 'a Glory with little angels cavorting with various flowers in different attitudes, which is glorious indeed to look at [Woburn Abbey, Bedfordshire]. The other is a vertical picture depicting the glorious Patriarch Saint Joseph with the Christ Child by the hand and a glory opening up above [the present work]. The other three are saint Francis of Assisi [unidentified], a Saint Francis of Paul [private collection, Sotheby's, London, 6 December 1989, lot 107], and a Saint Francis Xavier [Wadsworth Atheneum, Hartford], each one admirable in its own way'. Eminente was a significant patron of Murillo's and it is possible that the present painting had originally been commissioned by him. The purchaser, Don Francisco Artier, was associated by Waterhouse with the family of Sir Daniel Arthur, a merchant and banker who lived in Spain and who was significant for Murillo's fortuna in England. His widow later brought back to England a collection of Old Master paintings which included three Murillos (see E. Waterhouse, 'Murillo and Eighteenth Century Painting Outside Spain', in Bartolomé Murillo 1617-1682, Madrid/London, 1983, pp. 70-71), one of which was the Cherubs Scattering Flowers formerly belonging to the Eminente, and later, Artier group.

This painting was next recorded by the dramatist and author, Richard Cumberland, in 1782, in the collection of the marquis de Santiago in Madrid. He wrote that this, and the other Murillos owned by the marquis, were 'superior to all the works by this author in the royal collection' (op. cit.). Twenty-five years later, at the height of the Napoleonic Wars, the painting came onto the art-market and was acquired by William Buchanan via his agent, G. Augustus Wallis, in August 1808. It was shipped to England where it was sold to a Mr Harris, who died some time before 1824, and very soon after was acquired by George Byng (1764-1847). The painting hung at his house, Wrotham Park, and remained in the collection of his family, the Earls of Strafford, until its sale by order of the Trustees in 1990.

In his ground-breaking essay on Francesco Fanelli, John Pope-Hennessy cited two English sources who described the artist as the 'the one eyed Italian' (Pope-Hennessy, loc. cit.). Fanelli was born in Florence, but was in Genoa by 1605, and is recorded working in marble in Genoa in 1615. At some point after 1630 Fanelli moved to London, with documentation placing him there in March 1632 (Wengraf, loc. cit.). By 1635 Fanelli was the court sculptor of King Charles I, under whose patronage his reputation was established.

Fanelli executed a number of small bronzes for Charles I and for William Cavendish, 1st Duke of Newcastle (1592-1676), including 'a horse ambling' recorded at Cavendish's home, Welbeck Abbey, by George Vertue in 1727. This horse is significant because it is the same model as used for the present equestrian bronzes of Francisco de Moncada and Gaspar de Guzman (see following lot). It is not known when Fanelli first created this model of a pacing horse, but it is possible that it was done in Genoa.

Francisco de Moncada (1586-1635) was a Spanish diplomat, soldier and writer, who first served as ambassador to the Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand II. In 1630 he was appointed commander-in-chief of the Spanish navy in the Netherlands, in 1632 he was put in charge of all Spanish forces in the Netherlands, and then in 1634 he was made interim-governor of the Spanish Netherlands. Moncada died in 1635 and it is reasonable to assume that the present bronze was commissioned whilst he was still alive and after his rise in status from 1630.

Stock has argued that the presence of this bronze of Moncada and the following bronze of Guzman indicate that Fanelli stayed in Flanders en route from Genoa to London (Stock, loc. cit.). The model of Moncada sitting up alert on horseback, with his right arm outstretched, and the stallion with its head inclined and locks of mane flowing down the right side of its neck, is seemingly based on Rubens' equestrian portrait of the Duke of Lerma of 1603, which Fanelli would likely have seen engraved.

In 1634 Van Dyck painted two portraits of Moncada in Flanders; a large equestrian portrait (Louvre, Paris, inv. no. 1240), also based on Rubens' portrait of the Duke of Lerma, and a three-quarter portrait (Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna, inv. no. GG 499). Fanelli and Van Dyck would have known each other at the court of Charles I, and it is possible that one artist secured the commission for the other, and that the composition composed by one artist was influential on the other.

The present bronze is the only known version of the model. As with the subsequent bronze of Gaspar de Guzman, the horse and the rider are cast separately; it is likely that this was done so that Fanelli could re-use the model of the horse for each commission.

but the superior quality of the present bronze sets it apart from the latter two casts. The example in Detroit was first published by Bode in 1908, and has ever since been subject to debate amongst scholars. There have been a number of differences of opinion regarding the authorship and dating of this group of bronzes, but in 2002 Darr catalogued the Detroit version as 'attributed to Francesco Fanelli, circa 1630-1635' with the author noting that there was a consensus of opinion between himself, Avery, Hecht, Montagu, Radcliffe and Raggio that 'at least the better quality cast in Detroit and the group formerly owned by Cyril Humphries, London, both date from the first half of the seventeenth century, as Bode, Valentiner and others had argued' (Darr, loc. cit.).

The identification of the sitter as Don Gaspar de Guzman, Duke of San Lucar, known as the Count-Duke of Olivares (1587-1645) was made on the basis of comparison with Rubens' oil sketch of Olivares, and Paulus Pontius' engraving based on that sketch. This identification has been backed up by Darr and other scholars, overturning previous assumptions that the rider displayed was Philip IV. Olivares was Philip IV's First Minister from 1621 to 1643, and exerted huge influence on the King and largely directed Spain's foreign policy for those twenty-two years. The Detroit bronze has a traditional provenance to the ancestors of Ambrogio Spinola, 1st Marquis of the Balbases (1571-1630), a Spanish general and great military commander whom Olivares employed militarily on numerous occasions, and it has been subsequently suggested that a member of the Spinola family might have commissioned the original bronzes of both Olivares and Moncada (Darr, ibid).

MADAME LANGWEIL

Madame Florine Langweil was a highly regarded and influential Parisian dealer of Asian works of art, who worked from 4 Boulevard Italiens and Place Saint-Georges in the 1890s, at a time when it was rare for a woman to have her own business. She gained an advantage over her competitors by sourcing works of art directly through French contacts living in China, amongst whom was a French Bishop, rather than buying stock in bulk.

Her well-honed eye and in-depth knowledge meant she was adept at selecting items for the distinctive Paris and London markets, and soon counted an impressive array of serious collectors amongst her clients and friends including Marquise de Ganay and his sister the Countess of Béhague, Gertrude Stein, Henri Rochefort and Robert de Montesquiou. Pope Pius XI also sought her advice on several pieces in the papal collection. Amusingly she is purported to have told another key client, the American financier and avid collector John Pierpont-Morgan, that he was not rich enough to purchase a superb gilt-ground screen from her stock.

Many pieces that were supplied by her can now be found in internationally renowned museums such as the Rijsmuseum and the Hermitage. In 1913 she decided to relocate to her home town in Alsace. As per her wishes upon her death at the age of 97 in 1958, her collection was dispersed at auctions held by Galerie Charpentier and Drouot in 1959.

According to family tradition this screen was purchased directly from Mme. Langweil in 1911 by Maria Luisa MacClure Edwards (1855-1926).

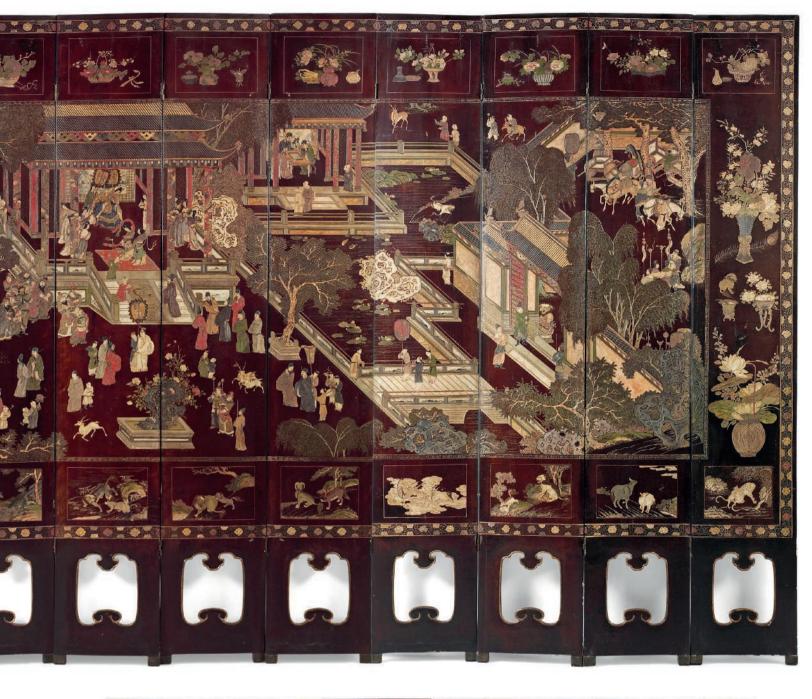

THE EDWARDS FAMILY, SANTIAGO, CHILE

Maria Luisa MacClure Ossandón (1855-1926) married Agustín Edwards Ross (1852-1897) thus uniting two influencial Chilean families, who had a great impact on the financial and political development of Chile from the early 19th century onwards.

The Edwards family presence in Chile can be traced to the British doctor George Edwards who married Chilean Isabel Ossandón e Iribárren in 1806. The most influential and successful of their children, Agustín settled in Valparaiso in 1850 and founded the bank A. Edwards; other sons had successful mining businesses and also embarked upon careers in politics.

Agustín Edwards Ross (1852-1897) is most famous for founding the national newspaper El Mecurio in Valparaiso and was later senator. His eldest son, also Agustín Edwards MacClure Ross (1878-1941) was plenipotiary to Great Britain in 1910-1920. It was another of his sons, Carlos Ricardo Edwards Ross (1880-?) and his wife Margarita (Margot) Mackenna Eyzaguirre, who apparently inherited this screen upon his mother's death. They resided in one of Santiago's grand palacios, Casa Edwards Mackenna, Alameda 2143. Agustín and Carlos' sister Maria Edwards MacClure (1893-1972) emigrated to Paris and it is possible that she provided the link to Madame Langweil, from whom the screen is said to have been purchased directly in 1911.

Antonio Ponce was born in Valladolid and raised in Madrid where he began his career as a painter. Married to the niece of the great still life painter Juan van der Hamen y León, Ponce's early style owed much to his uncle by marriage, utilising the dark backgrounds and ordered, symmetrical compositions which had been frequently favoured by the earlier generation of still life painters in Spain. As his career progressed, however, he began to develop his own more distinct artistic identity and style, lightening the backgrounds of his paintings to allow for a more subtle rendering of light and shade, and arranging his compositions in a less formal way.

Signed 'Anto Ponce / fe', this work dates from the 1640s or1650s when Ponce's work increasingly became characterised by these lightened backgrounds and less regimented designs, often featuring baskets of fruit. To the left of the composition stands a round glass vase filled with sunflowers, morning glory and daffodils. To the right is a large white porcelain bowl, decorated with blue semi-circles, and filled with peaches, pomegranates, grapes and fresh dates. Between these lie two pomegranates, one of which is split open, and a large quince. Characteristically, each element is treated with particular care and a luminosity and clarity of style which exemplifies Ponce's works of this period. The open pomegranate, its seeds and pith spilling out onto the stone shelf, is especially precisely rendered, perfectly demonstrating the painter's observational and technical skills. A similar arrangement of fruit is found in a small canvas in the Prado, Madrid (fig.1), where once again Ponce painted both open and closed pomegranates on a stone ledge, carefully replicating their smooth exterior and complex interior structure in a clear and careful manner.

The town of Cuenca, near Guadalajara appears, from surviving examples, to have been the most productive of the Spanish weaving centres in the 17th century. While the technique is the same as that of all of Spain, with knots tied onto single warps in alternating rows, the colours and designs are usually immediately recognisable. The palette consists of a golden yellow, cream, blue and green and the designs were inspired by carpets from Anatolia which were available at that time but at a great cost (D. King & D. Sylvester, The Eastern Carpet in the Western World, London, 1933, figs.18-20). For a further discussion on this group please see Sarah B. Fascinated by the relationship existing between the figure and its architectural surroundings, during the 1950s Henry Moore explored the plastic possibilities of the seated and reclining figure set against a bench, or, in the case of the present lot, a curved wall. Illustrating the artist's ability to solve the problem of having to position his sculpture in front of large public buildings, which might otherwise detract from a work's impact, Draped Seated Figure against Curved Wall dates to the height of these explorations, ultimately leading to the large scale sculpture, UNESCO Reclining Figure of 1957-1968. Although Moore eventually decided to leave the UNESCO commission without a backdrop, the harmonious balance of smooth, curvilinear forms uniting the composition render the present lot one of the artist's most successful and fully resolved integrations.

Other versions of Draped Seated Figure against Curved Wall are housed in the collection of the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Washington D.C., and the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge.

In the East the character of Artemis was different from her Greek counterpart. At Ephesos she was worshipped as the great mother-goddess. She also had a lunar aspect, presiding over childbirth. In the above roundel she holds the symbols of her power over life and death, the torch and the bow and arrow. She could destroy mortals with her well-aimed arrows, as could her brother Apollo. Apollousa (the destructress) and locheaira (who likes to let fly her arrows) were two of her epithets. The cult of Artemis the Torchbearer was particularly strong at Ephesos where a number of statues were dedicated in the great temple there, cf. G. M. Rogers, The Sacred Identity of Ephesos, London, 1991, pp. 161-162.

The exact function of these roundels is uncertain; possibly they were used as phalerae, see Glories of the Past: Ancient Art from the Shelby White and Leon Levy Collection, exh. cat., The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, no. 140, p. 195.

The story of Apelles and Campaspe is recounted in Pliny the Elder's Natural History (35:10-36). It tells how Apelles was asked by the Emperor to paint a portrait of his favourite concubine, the beautiful Campaspe, and how, while working on the commission, the artist fell in love with his sitter. In appreciation of the painter's work, Alexander gave Campaspe's hand to Apelles in marriage. For centuries, the romantic tale of Apelles and Campaspe provided a means by which painters could praise their courtly and noble art. Apelles of Kos himself was celebrated as the most gifted artist of the ancient world, with an unrivalled ability to create likenesses. Pliny wrote that 'he singly contributed almost more to painting than all the other artists put together' (35: 79).

This is the earliest of Tiepolo's treatments of this subject - a great reflection on the art of painting itself - and dates from the early- to mid-1720s. The design was adapted for a larger picture of the later 1720s, now in the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts (A. Morassi, A Complete Catalogue of the Paintings of G.B. Tiepolo, London, 1962, pp. 29-30): the positions of the artist, his head now turned to look backwards at Campaspe, and table are moved to the right, but the setting is little changed, with fluted pilasters, a different statue turned in the other direction, and the Palladian arcade of a type so loved by Veronese; the pictures in the painter's studio - Venus, and the Brazen Serpent in this canvas - are, however, changed. Campaspe, her face still in profile, is reversed and Alexander sits at her side, a less adolescent and more consciously heroic figure. Tiepolo's last picture of the subject, which measures 42 by 54 cm. and is thus similar in scale to the present canvas, was sold, Christie's, New York, 27 January 2000, lot 82 ($2,000,000) and is now in the J. Paul Getty Museum. It is generally thought to date from the late 1730s and is radically different in composition. Nonetheless Tiepolo clearly took his earlier pictures as points de départ for, apart from such necessary details as the easel, the background elements depend on these: the fluted pilasters become fluted columns, while the arcade is more elaborate and enriched with sculpture. Despite its intimate dimensions this, Tiepolo's first rendition of the subject, is thus a revealing link between the formative phase in the 1720s, when Tiepolo emerged as the most versatile Venetian master of the younger generation, and the period of his full maturity.

Morassi suggested that, in this picture, the painter portrayed himself, with his wife Cecilia Guardi - and the angle of the head would indeed be possible for a self-portrait - but Christiansen considers that such a claim can only be convincingly made for the Montreal picture.

In 1775, Luis Paret y Alcázar was exiled from the court of Charles III of Spain, where he had been working since the beginning of the decade, on account of his perceived bad influence on the Infante Luis. Paret initially travelled to Puerto Rico, but returned to Bilbao in 1778 where he embarked on an ambitious series of views of towns and harbours along the Cantabrian coastline. These paintings, of which the present work was certainly a part, date from 1783 onwards and proved so popular that Paret was granted a royal pardon and authorised to return to Madrid, receiving a direct commission from the king for the entire series in 1786.

Paret's Cantabrian views are executed in his characteristically light and vibrant style, depicting the harbour towns with a combination of careful topographic accuracy and artistic design. While painted on copper, and a little smaller than some other paintings assigned to the series (including that in the Musée des Beaux-Arts, Caen, painted on canvas and measuring 31½ x 47½ in.), the composition, colouration, design and subject of The Harbour of Bermeo are all in keeping with the other examples in the group. Indeed, when offered in these Rooms in 1983, it was sold consecutively with another work by the artist of the same dimensions, depicting a View of El Arenal de Bilbao (London, National Gallery, fig. 1) which undoubtedly constitutes another of the harbour-scapes made during his exile in northern Spain. Though the official royal commission for the series was made in 1786, the present work is dated 1783 and Paret was evidently working on the project before this date, which may explain the somewhat disparate supports and scales of the paintings.

Bermeo was at the time a relatively important coastal town in northern Spain and, from the late fifteenth to the early seventeenth century, had been the capital of the province of Biscay. The increasing importance of larger cities, like Bilbao, however, had resulted in a decline in the town's significance by the eighteenth century. Paret depicts the town looking north-east over the main harbour; in the foreground, fisher men and women unload various cargos onto the shore, while a monk stands watching and blessing their endeavours. Paret expertly captures the play of light on the harbour, leaving the foreground under the shade of a passing cloud, while the town beyond is illuminated by the light of the sun and is reflected in the waterfront. The church of Santa Eufemia can be seen at the right of the composition, forming the main focal point of this area. Built in the late thirteenth century and renovated in the late fifteenth century, the tower with its pinnacled dome was constructed later in 1783, the year the present work is dated. The ruination of the church in Paret's work seems to suggest the artist had taken some artistic liberties with the scene in order to suit his own compositional objectives, though never losing the topographic accuracy of the view.

Paret's painting was evidently of great appeal to the royal family and was later copied for them in mosaicked stone as a decorative table top by the Real Laboratorio de Piedras Duras del Buen Retiro in Madrid (now Museo del Prado, Madrid, fig. 2).

Model and muse to some of the most influential artists of the twentieth century, Kiki de Montparnasse, née Alice Prin, rose from humble origins to become one of the central figures of the Parisian avant-garde. Finding her way as an artist's model from a tender age, Kiki soon became intricately woven into the fabric of the flourishing bohemian society of Montparnasse, posing for painters, sculptors and photographers by day, while frequenting the many cafés and roaring bars which lined the streets by night.

With her rebellious black bob and infamous joie de vivre, Kiki symbolised the liberated, no-holds-barred attitude of the early 1920s, becoming a fast favourite of artists such as Man Ray and Moïse Kisling - and eventually earning the title as the undisputed 'Queen of Montparnasse'.

Capitalising on the sharp angularity of her iconic bob and heavily kohl-rimmed eyes, Pablo Gargallo found in Kiki the perfect platform through which to fully explore the descriptive potential of negative space – a pursuit which had come to characterise his oeuvre from his earliest sheet metal constructions.

Reducing the figure to its most elemental attributes while still retaining the essential character of his sitter, Gargallo's exploration in bronze was immediately recognised as one of his most successful compositions, with notable examples in the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington D.C. and Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris.

Pierrette Gargallo-Anguera and Jean Anguera have confirmed the authenticity of this work.

Anatolian coupled-column prayer rugs are an exceptional group of Ottoman court rugs, characterised by their elegant proportions and effortless melding of delicate architectural details and stylised floral elements. In her oft-cited article 'Coupled-column Prayer Rugs', May Beattie discusses the development of the design of this small group and traces their origins back to the great 16th century court rugs such as the Ballard Prayer Rug in the Metropolitan Museum ('Coupled-column Prayer Rugs', Oriental Art, vol. XIV, no. 4, Winter 1968, pp. 243-258). Most scholars think that the present design was brought by weavers to Central Anatolia with the earlier examples being made further west (J.Bailey, 'Ladik Prayer Rugs', Hali, no. 28, October-December 1995, p. 25).

A number of examples of this design have survived in Central Europe where they were exported in the 17th century (G. Vegh & K. Layer, Turkish Rugs in Transylvania, Museum of Applied Arts, Budapest, London, 1977 reprint, no. 23; F. Batari, 500 Years of Ottoman Turkish Carpet Weaving, exhibition catalogue, Budapest, 1986, nos. 45, 47 & 48; F. Batari, Ottoman Turkish Carpets, Budapest, 1994, pls. 66-68; A. Kertesz-Badrus, Türkische Teppiche in Siebenburgen, Bucharest, 1985, pl. 21). The dating of these rugs has in the past varied greatly, but is helped by Nicolaes van Gelder's inclusion of a coupled-column prayer rug of this group in his 1664 painting, Still Life, now in the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam. A few related examples have appeared on the market (for example with Elio Cittone, Hali, vol. 5, no. 1, 1982, gallery p. I; and Christie's, New York, 15 March 1996, lot 144). The present lot relates closely to a number of coupled-columned prayer rugs illustrated in S. Ionescu, Antique Ottoman Rugs In Transylvania, Rome, 2005, pp. 162-163 but in particular cat. 200, an example from the Black Church, Brasov, inv. no. 227.

Francisco de Zurbarán was one of the most significant and prolific painters working in Spain during the seventeenth century and remains renowned for his perceptive, realistic depictions of monastic life and saints. Born in Fuente de Cantos in Badajoz, Zurbarán moved to Seville to train as a painter in 1614. His first major commission of 1626 saw the production of a large decorative cycle of paintings made for the Dominican monastery of San Pablo el Real in Seville. This project established his artistic career and from that point on Zurbarán produced a number of large, important commissions for monastic houses in and around Seville, before moving to Madrid in 1658. The artist's characteristic combination of Caravaggesque realism and chiaroscuro with his more local Spanish aesthetic was well suited to the ascetic sensibilities of his monastic patrons, whilst his incisive observation and carefully judged expression of faith made him a continually popular artist among the religious movements of central and southern Spain.

St Thomas of Villnueva was born Tomás García y Martínez in Fuentellana in 1488 and educated at Villanueva de los Infantes (from where he took his name) and later at the University of Alcalá de Henares. He joined the Augustinian Order at Salamanca in 1516 and was ordained as a priest two years later. By 1544, Thomas had been nominated Bishop of Valencia, receiving a sum of money to renovate his palace which he chose instead to distribute amongst the poor. For the remainder of his life, Thomas worked to alleviate the suffering of the destitute and needy in his diocese. After his death in 1555, his body was buried in Valencia cathedral, where it remains today, and just over a hundred years later, in 1658, he was canonised by Pope Alexander VII. Following this canonisation there resulted a rapid production of numerous depictions of the saint in Spain with some of the country's foremost painters, including Bartolomé Esteban Murillo, painting scenes of the Charity of St Thomas of Villanueva during the 1660s and 1670s. Zurbarán's St Thomas of Villanueva was painted at a relatively late stage in the artist's career. He shows the saint, whose face and hands are beautifully modelled, dressed in the black habit of the Augustinians and wearing a bishop's mitre, handing coins to two beggars before him. It has been suggested that Zurbaran's composition was itself modelled on an earlier example by Vicente Juan Masip (also known as Juan de Juanes) painted for Valencia cathedral in 1568, perhaps at the request of the patrons. While the prototype no longer survives, depictions of the saint's charitable acts were a constant feature of his iconography and formed the main focus for his veneration.

The numerous depictions of the saint which began appearing after his canonisation were usually commissioned and painted for the Augustinian Order, and the present work seems to have been one such example, made circa 1660. It was apparently first described by the painter and writer Antonio Ponz in his Viage de España (1772-1794) in the interior of the church in the Augustinian convent at Alcalá de Henares as one of 'los quadros colaterales del altar mayor son de Sebastian Rici' ('the paintings at the sides of the high altarpiece are by Sebastiano Ricci'). The paintings were later identified by Ceán Bermudez as works by José Claudio Antolínez, but it was not until 1960 that Guinard proposed the correct attribution to Zurbarán. The commission for the paintings, which represented St Thomas of Villanueva and St Augustine (private collection, Madrid, fig. 1), clearly held a place a great importance and significance in the Order and for their church at Alcalá de Henares. By commissioning Zurbarán to paint the lateral paintings for their high altar, they were placing themselves within a long tradition of monastic patronage.

Alejandro de Loarte, who lived and worked in Madrid before establishing himself in Toledo, was one of the most significant still life painters in the early years of the genre's development in Spain. The still life tradition had emerged in the Netherlands and Northern Italy during the last half of the sixteenth century, and by around 1600 its popularity had spread to Spain, gaining prominence through the work of artists like Juan Sánchez Cotán, whose work, including his Still Life with Game, Vegetables and Fruit in the Museo Nacional del Prado (fig. 1), served as the precursor to paintings like the present work. Loarte was a versatile painter as the inventory drawn up eight days after his death on 12 December 1626 clearly demonstrates. The paintings in his studio were itemised and nearly half of those listed were religious works, eight were portraits and fifteen were landscapes. In fact, of the 149 paintings recorded, only thirty-nine were listed as still lifes: 'lienzos de frutas'. Of these, it is likely some would have been bodegón paintings, showing everyday 'pantry' items arranged simply on a stone ledge or in a niche, of which the present work is a superb example. Loarte's still lifes, the genre in which he truly excelled as a painter, all date from the last four years of his life and mark the apogee of his career. They were evidently highly popular during his lifetime and his will makes claim to a payment for fifteen further still life pictures, twelve of which had already been delivered to his clients. Works by Alejandro de Loarte, particularly of the present quality, appear very infrequently on the market, partly owing to the limited period he spent working in the genre. Indeed, a work fully attributed to the artist has not been offered for sale at auction in more than thirty years.

The present composition is symmetrically arranged with a chicken, sausages and cuts of meat hanging from strings hooked onto a thin wooden bar above two heads of salad greens and a large cardoon arranged along a stone shelf below. This ledge motif, which is closed off at the top by the board from which the meat hangs, recalls the work of Loarte's esteemed contemporary Juan Sánchez Cotán, who remained a formative influence on the Spanish still life genre throughout the seventeenth century. Loarte's technique, however, shows a more direct, fluid and vigorous approach than that of his earlier contemporary. The restricted colour palette of Loarte's painting, consisting predominantly of subtle shades of brown, white and grey, heightens the dramatic impact of the work with the dark background bringing each of the hanging elements $% \left(1\right) =\left(1\right) \left(1\right)$ sharply into focus. The lower foreground of the painting is dominated by the cardoon, a vegetable related to the artichoke, which appears with regularity in early Spanish still life paintings. Either side of it lie two heads of salad leaves casting strong shadows over the edge of the shelf on which they have been placed. Loarte's technique of using broad brush-strokes to indicate light, shade and texture is particularly appreciable in areas like the tail feathers of the hanging chicken, the slight shine on the sausage skins and the carefully articulated stalks of the cardoon.

Painted at the height of the artist's powers in 1625, this painting shows Loarte's full mastery in composing and painting still lifes, as well as his key role in advancing and promoting the genre in Spain.

AN ALCARAZ FRAGMENTARY WHEEL RUG

CENTRAL SPAIN, MID-15TH CENTURY

Unevenly worn throughout, a few surface spot stains, a few scattered holes, a number of repairs and reweaves

£15,000-20,000

$19,000-24,000 €17,000-22,000

The Spanish 'Holbein' or 'Wheel' fragment offered here is a product of a commercial industry which existed in Alcaraz in the 15th century. Much of the design inspiration was provided by carpets from Anatolia that were available, although extremely costly, in Europe by the 14th century. A favoured type to be copied were 'large pattern Holbein' carpets in all their variety. The current lot is one of a group referred to by Dimand and Mailey as being the third variety of Spanish 'Holbein' carpets which often comprise large multiple repeats of the 'wheel' motif. Other rugs from this group differ in details of the design and in the number of squares (M.S. Dimand and Jean Mailey, Oriental Rugs in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, New York, 1973, pp. 254-258). A single column fragment that sold Christie's, King Street, 21 April 2015, lot 49 shares the exact design and colouring of our example and it is likely that they originally emanated from a single carpet.

A MAMLUK RUG

PROBABLY CAIRO,
FIRST HALF 16TH CENTURY

Low pile throughout, areas of staining, a few cobbled repairs and reweaves, some loss to all four sides

6 ft. 5 in. x 4 ft. 5 in. (196 x 134 cm.)

$31,000-49,000 €28,000-45,000

The interplay of geometric forms is one of the leitmotifs of Mamluk Egyptian art. Over the two and a half centuries that the two branches of this dynasty were in power in Egypt, the geometry used in all art forms became ever more complex. The straightforward geometry based on the octagon, which was the staple of the early Mamluk period, developed through the 15th century to include ten-sided and twelve-sided forms with much more complicated forms in the surrounding areas. Such geometry is found in window grilles and wooden constructions including doors and minbars. It is included in stone mosaic floors, covering the exterior of domes in polychrome ceilings, on the "carpet pages" of qur'ans, and on book covers. What unites all these different milieu is the strapwork which forms the boundaries between the various forms, which also forms a pattern that is endlessly repeatable.

What is remarkable about the Mamluk carpets is that they follow very different geometry from the other materials. The patterns are certainly not infinitely repeatable; on the contrary they are almost always very strongly centralised. There is also no strapwork dividing the geometric forms, so that their divisions are less clear. Such strapwork is only found in the borders of two Mamluk carpets, one in the Bardini Collection (A. Boralevi, Oriental Geometries - Stefano Bardini and the Antique Carpet, Livorno, 1999, p. 27), the other formerly in the same collection but now missing (Charles Grant Ellis, 'Mysteries of the misplaced Mamluks', Textile Museum Journal, II, 2, December 1967, p. 15, pl. 21). Thus in almost all examples there is almost a deliberate ambiguity about which areas form the field and which form motifs. These carpets share a limited palette and an intricate, almost kaleidoscopic design created by the juxtaposition of colour and form instead of the clearly delineated designs found in most other carpets. The creation of a Mamluk carpet cartoon must have been a complex process indeed.

A number of people have tried to establish a chronology within Mamluk carpets, but without complete success. The most comprehensive study still remains E. Kühnel & L. Bellinger, Cairene Rugs and Others Technically Related, Washington D.C., 1957. The construction of their designs makes comparisons with other art forms very difficult. It is generally accepted, however, that they were made in Cairo in the later 14th and first half of the 15th century, before the new designs created for the Ottomans in Istanbul put their complexity out of fashion (Kühnel & Bellinger: op cit.).

AN ALCARAZ CARPET

£10.000-15.000

$13,000-18,000 €12,000-17,000

A number of Alcaraz 'Wreath' carpets have survived, all of which are variations on the same theme as seen here. There is a clear parallel between this group and the 15th century 'Wheel' carpets (see lot 105), although the previous Islamic stellar octagon design has become the classical oak-leaf wreath that is seen here, reflecting the Christianisation of the region. The earliest examples, such as a fragment in the Textile Museum, Washington D.C., exhibit a greater variety of colour than the bi-tonal palette of the present lot (E. Kühnel, Textile Museum, Catalogue of Spanish Rugs, 12th Century to 19th Century, Washington D.C., 1953, R84.2, p. 29, pl. XXVI). This colour scheme, which utilises the new cochineal dye from Mexico, is also seen in a comparable example from the Joseph Lees Williams Memorial Collection, Philadelphia Museum of Art, inv. no. 55-65-36 (C. Grant Ellis, Oriental Carpets in the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Philadelphia, 1988, no. 71, p. 260). The linked dragon motifs in the green ton-sur-ton border of the present lot are a charming addition.

$13,000-18,000 €12,000-17,000

The origin of the design of the present lot, both the field and the border, is clearly linked to the Kirman 'Vase' carpets of Safavid Persia. The highly decorative border is seen in a 16th/17th century Southern Persian fragment published by F.R. Martin (A History of Oriental Carpets Before 1800, Vienna, 1908, pl. XX). A contemporaneous carpet is illustrated in Werner Grote Hasenbalg, Der Orientteppich - seine Geschichte und seine Kultur, Berlin 1922, vol. 3, pl. 62 and another was offered in Christie's South Kensington, 10 November 2004, lot 435. The group is discussed in depth, and a number of comparable carpets illustrated, by T. D. Cook and S. Belger Krody, 'A Persian Puzzle', Hali, 131, November-December 2003, pp. 88-92. Following their research Cook and Krody point to a South Persia attribution, although their basis for this is not clear. The technical characteristics found in these weavings, along with the well-documented movement of 'Vase' designs to North West Persia, gives a more probable origin for this small and unusual group of carpets.

2 OUR RESPONSIBILITY FOR OUR DESCRIPTION OF LOTS

We do not provide any guarantee in relation to the nature of a lot apart from our authenticity warranty contained in paragraph E2 and to the extent provided in paragraph I below.

CONDITION

(a) The condition of lots sold in our auctions can vary widely due to factors such as age, previous damage, restoration, repair and wear and tear. Their nature means that they will rarely be in perfect condition. Lots are sold 'as is', in the condition they are in at the time of the sale, without any representation or warranty or assumption of liability of any kind as to condition by Christie's or by the seller

(b) Any reference to condition in a catalogue entry or in a condition report will not amount to a full description of condition, and images may not show a lot clearly. Colours and shades may look different in print or on screen to how they look on physical inspection. Condition reports may be available to help you evaluate the condition of a lot. Condition reports are provided free of charge as a convenience to our buyers and are for guidance only. They offer our opinion but they may not refer to all faults, inherent defects, restoration, alteration or adaptation because our staff are not professional restorers or conservators. It is your responsibility to ensure that you have requested, received and considered any condition report.

4 VIEWING LOTS PRE-AUCTION

IFWFI I FRY

Coloured gemstones (such as rubies, sapphires and emeralds) may have been treated to improve their look, through methods such as heating and oiling. These methods are accepted by the international jewellery trade but may make the gemstone less strong and/or require special care over time.

(b) All types of gemstones may have been improved by some method. You may request a gemmological report for any item which does not have a report if the quest is made to us at least three weeks before the date of the auction and you pay the fee for the report. (c) We do not obtain a gemmological report for every gemstone sold in our auctions. Where we do get gemmological reports from internationally accepted gemmological laboratories, such reports will be described in the catalogue. Reports from American gemmological laboratories will describe any improvement or treatment to the gemstone. Reports from European gemmological laboratories will describe any improvement or treatment only if we request that they do so, but will confirm when no improvement or treatment has been made. Because of differences in approach and technology, laboratories may not agree whether a particular gemstone has been treated, the amount of treatment or whether treatment is permanent. gemmological laboratories will only report on the improvements or treatments known to the laboratories at the date of the report.

(d) For iewellery sales, estimates are based on the (d) For Jewenery sates, estimates are based on the information in any gemmological report or, if no report is available, assume that the gemstones may have been treated or enhanced

WATCHES & CLOCKS

(a) Almost all clocks and watches are repaired in their lifetime and may include parts which are not original. We do not give a warranty that any individual component part of any watch is authentic. Watchbands described as 'associated' are not part of the original watch and may not be authentic. Clocks may be sold without pendulums, weights or keys.

(b) As collectors' watches often have very fine and complex mechanisms, a general service, change of battery or further repair work may be necessary, for which you are responsible. We do not give a warranty that any watch is in good working order. Certificates are not available unless described in the catalogue.

(c) Most wristwatches have been opened to find out the type and quality of movement. For that reason, wristwatches with water resistant cases may not be waterproof and we recommend you have them checked by a competent watchmaker before use.

Important information about the sale, transport and shipping of watches and watchbands can be found in paragraph H2(g).

We must receive your completed Written Bid Form at least 24 hours before the auction. Bids must be placed in the currency of the saleroom. The auctioneer will take reasonable steps to carry out written bids at the lowest possible price, taking into account the reserve. If you make a written bid on a lot which does not have a reserve and there is no higher bid than yours, we will bid on your behalf at around 50% of the low estimate or, if lower, the amount of your bid. If we receive written bids on a lot for identical amounts, and at the auction these are the highest bids on the lot, we will sell the lot to the bidder whose written bid we received first.

AT THE SALE

WHO CAN ENTER THE AUCTION

We may, at our option, refuse admission to our premises or decline to permit participation in any auction or to reject any bid.

2 RESERVES

Unless otherwise indicated, all lots are subject to a reserve. We identify lots that are offered without reserve with the symbol • next to the lot number. The reserve cannot be more than the lot's low

ALICTIONEER'S DISCRETION

The auctioneer can at his sole option

(a) refuse any bid;

(b) move the bidding backwards or forwards in any way he or she may decide, or change the order of the lots;

(c) withdraw any lot:

(d) divide any lot or combine any two or more

(e) reopen or continue the bidding even after the hammer has fallen; and

(f) in the case of error or dispute and whether during or after the auction, to continue the bidding, determine the successful bidder, cancel the sale of the lot, or reoffer and resell any lot. If any dispute relating to bidding arises during or after the auction, the auctioneer's decision in exercise of this option is

4 BIDDING

The auctioneer accepts bids from:

BIDDING ON BEHALF OF THE SELLER

The auctioneer may, at his or her sole option, bid on behalf of the seller up to but not including the amount of the reserve either by making consecutive bids or by making bids in response to other bidders. The auctioneer will not identify these as bids made on behalf of the seller and will not make any bid on behalf of the seller at or above the reserve. If lots are offered without reserve, the auctioneer will generally decide to open the bidding at 50% of the low estimate for the lot. If no bid is made at that level, the auctioneer may decide to go backwards at his or her sole option until a bid is made, and then continue up from that amount. In the event that there are no bids on a lot, the auctioneer may deem such lot unsold.

6 BID INCREMENTS

Bidding generally starts below the low estimate and in steps (bid increments). The auctioneer will decide at his or her sole option where the bidding should start and the bid increments. The usual bid increments are shown for guidance only on the Written Bid Form at the back of this catalogue.

7 CURRENCY CONVERTER

The saleroom video screens (and Christies LIVETM) may show bids in some other major currencies as well as sterling. Any conversion is for guidance only and we cannot be bound by any rate of exchange used. Christie's is not responsible for any error (human or otherwise), omission or breakdown in providing these services.

8 SUCCESSEUL BIDS

Unless the auctioneer decides to use his or her discretion as set out in paragraph C₃ above, when the auctioneer's hammer strikes, we have accepted the last bid. This means a contract for sale has been formed between the seller and the successful bidder. We will issue an invoice only to the registered bidder who made the successful bid. While we send out invoices by post and/or email after the auction, we do not accept responsibility for telling you whether or not your bid was successful. If you have bid by written bid, you should contact us by telephone or in person as soon as possible after the auction to get details of the outcome of your bid to avoid having to pay unnecessary storage charges.

9 LOCAL BIDDING LAWS

You agree that when bidding in any of our sales that you will strictly comply with all local laws and regulations in force at the time of the sale for the relevant sale site.

D THE BUYER'S PREMIUM, TAXES AND ARTIST'S RESALE ROYALTY

1 THE BUYER'S PREMIUM

In addition to the hammer price, the successful bidder agrees to pay us a buyer's premium on the hammer price of each lot sold. On all lots we charge 25% of the hammer price up to and including £100,000, 20% on that part of the hammer price over £100,000 and up to and including £2,000,000, and 12% of that part of the hammer price above £2,000,000.

2 TAXES

The successful bidder is responsible for any applicable tax including any VAT, sales or compensating use tax or equivalent tax wherever they arise on the hammer price and the buyer's premium. It is the buyer's responsibility to ascertain and pay all taxes due. You can find details of how VAT and VAT reclaims are dealt with in the section of the catalogue headed 'VAT Symbols and Explanation'. VAT charges and refunds depend on the particular circumstances of the buyer so this section, which is not exhaustive, should be used only as a general guide. In all circumstances EU and UK law takes precedence. If you have any questions about VAT, please contact Christie's VAT Department on +44 (0)20 7839 9060 (email: VAT_london@christies. com, fax: +44 (0)20 3219 6076).

3 ARTIST'S RESALE ROYALTY

In certain countries, local laws entitle the artist or the artist's estate to a royalty known as 'artist's resale right' when any ${\bf lot}$ created by the artist is sold. We identify these ${\bf lots}$ with the symbol λ next to the ${\bf lot}$ number. If these laws apply to a ${\bf lot}$, you must pay us an extra amount equal to the royalty. We will pay the royalty to the appropriate authority on the seller's behalf.

The artist's resale royalty applies if the hammer price of the lot is 1,000 euro or more. The total royalty for any lot cannot be more than 12,500 euro. We work out the amount owed as follows:

Royalty for the portion of the hammer price (in euros)

4% up to 50,000

3% between 50,000.01 and 200,000

1% between 200,000.01 and 350,000

0.50% between 350,000.01 and 500,000

over 500,000, the lower of 0.25% and 12,500 euro. We will work out the artist's resale royalty using the euro to sterling rate of exchange of the European Central Bank on the day of the auction.

E WARRANTIES

1 SELLER'S WARRANTIES

For each lot, the seller gives a warranty that the seller:

(a) is the owner of the lot or a joint owner of the lot acting with the permission of the other co-owners or, if the seller is not the owner or a joint owner of the lot, has the permission of the owner to sell the lot, or the right to do so in law; and

(b) has the right to transfer ownership of the lot to the buyer without any restrictions or claims by

If either of the above warranties are incorrect, the seller shall not have to pay more than the purchase price (as defined in paragraph F1(a) below) paid by you to us. The seller will not be responsible to you for any reason for loss of profits or business, expected savings, loss of opportunity or interest, costs, damages, other damages or expenses. The seller gives no warranty in relation to any lot other than as set out above and, as far as the seller is allowed by law, all warranties from the seller to you, and all other obligations upon the seller which may be added to this agreement by law, are excluded.

2 OUR AUTHENTICITY WARRANTY

We warrant, subject to the terms below, that the lots in our sales are authentic (our 'authenticity warranty'). If, within five years of the date of the aution, you satisfy us that your lot is not authentic, subject to the terms below, we will refund the purchase price paid by you. The meaning of authentic can be found in the glossary at the end of these Conditions of Sale. The terms of the authenticity warranty are as follows:

(a) It will be honoured for a period of five years from the date of the auction. After such time, we will not be obligated to honour the authenticity warranty.

(b) It is given only for information shown in UPPERCASE type in the first line of the catalogue description (the 'Heading'). It does not apply to any information other than in the Heading even if shown in UPPERCASE type.

(c) The authenticity warranty does not apply to any Heading or part of a Heading which is qualified. Qualified means limited by a clarification in a lot's catalogue description or by the use in a Heading of one of the terms listed in the section titled Qualified Headings on the page of the catalogue headed 'Important Notices and Explanation of Cataloguing Practice'. For example, use of the term 'ATTRIBUTED TO...' in a Heading means that the lot is in Christie's opinion probably a work by the named artist but no warranty is provided that the lot is the work of the named artist. Please read the full list of Qualified Headings and a lot's full catalogue description before bidding.

(d) The authenticity warranty applies to the Heading as amended by any Saleroom Notice.

(e) The authenticity warranty does not apply where scholarship has developed since the auction leading to a change in generally accepted opinion. Further, it does not apply if the Heading either matched the generally accepted opinion of experts at the date of the sale or drew attention to any conflict of opinion.

(f) The authenticity warranty does not apply if the lot can only be shown not to be authentic by a scientific process which, on the date we published the catalogue, was not available or generally accepted for use, or which was unreasonably expensive or impractical, or which was likely to have damaged the lot.

(g) The benefit of the authenticity warranty is only available to the original buyer shown on the invoice for the lot issued at the time of the sale and only if the original buyer has owned the lot continuously between the date of the auction and the date of claim. It may not be transferred to anyone else.

(h) In order to claim under the authenticity warranty you must:

(i) give us written details, including full supporting evidence, of any claim within five years of the date of the auction:

(ii) at Christie's option, we may require you to provide the written opinions of two recognised experts in the field of the lot mutually agreed by you and us in advance confirming that the lot is not authentic. If we have any doubts, we reserve the right to obtain additional opinions at our expense; and

(iii) return the lot at your expense to the saleroom from which you bought it in the condition it was in at the time of sale.

(i) Your only right under this authenticity warranty is to cancel the sale and receive a refund of the purchase price paid by you to us. We will not, in any circumstances, be required to pay you more than the purchase price nor will we be liable for any loss of profits or business, loss of opportunity or value, expected savings or interest, costs, damages, other damages or expenses.

(j) Books. Where the lot is a book, we give an additional warranty for 14 days from the date of the sale that if on collation any lot is defective in text or illustration, we will refund your purchase price, subject to the following terms:

(a) This additional warranty does not apply to:

(i) the absence of blanks, half titles, tissue guards or advertisements, damage in respect of bindings, stains, spotting, marginal tears or other defects not affecting completeness of the text or illustration;

 (ii) drawings, autographs, letters or manuscripts, signed photographs, music, atlases, maps or periodicals;

(iii) books not identified by title:

(iv) lots sold without a printed estimate;

(v) books which are described in the catalogue as sold not subject to return; or

(vi) defects stated in any condition report or announced at the time of sale.

(b) To make a claim under this paragraph you must give written details of the defect and return the lot to the sale room at which you bought it in the same condition as at the time of sale, within 14 days of the date of the sale.

(k) South East Asian Modern and Contemporary Art and Chinese Calligraphy and Painting.

In these categories, the authenticity warranty does not apply because current scholarship does not permit the making of definitive statements. Christie's does, however, agree to cancel a sale in either of these two categories of art where it has been proven the lot is a forgery. Christie's will refund to the original buyer the purchase price in accordance with the terms of Christie's authenticity warranty, provided that the original buyer notifies us with full supporting evidence documenting the forgery claim within twelve (12) months of the date of the auction. Such evidence must be satisfactory to us that the lot is a forgery in accordance with paragraph E2(h)(ii) above and the lot must be returned to us in accordance with E2h(iii) above. Paragraphs E2(b), (c), (d), (e), (f) and (g) and (i) also apply to a claim under these categories.

(i) to charge interest from the due date at a rate of 5% a year above the UK Lloyds Bank base rate from time to time on the unpaid amount due;

(b) If you owe money to us or to another Christie's Group company, we can use any amount you do pay, including any deposit or other part-payment you have made to us, or which we owe you, to pay off any amount you owe to us or another Christie's Group company for any transaction.

TRANSPORT AND SHIPPING

TRANSPORT AND SHIPPING

We will enclose a transport and shipping form with each invoice sent to you. You must make all transport and shipping arrangements. However, we can arrange to pack, transport and ship your property if you ask us to and pay the costs of doing so. We recommend that you ask us for an estimate, especially for any large items or items of high value that need professional packing before you bid. We may also suggest other handlers, packers, transporters or experts if you ask us to do so. For more information, please contact Christie's Art Transport on +44 (0)20 7839 9060. See the information set out at www.christies.com/ shipping or contact us at arttransport_london@ christies.com. We will take reasonable care when we are handling, packing, transporting and shipping a lot. However, if we recommend another company for any of these purposes, we are not responsible for their acts, failure to act or neglect.

2 EXPORT AND IMPORT

Any lot sold at auction may be affected by laws on exports from the country in which it is sold and the import restrictions of other countries. Many countries require a declaration of export for property leaving the country and/or an import declaration on entry of property into the country. Local laws may prevent you from importing a lot or may prevent you selling a lot in the country you

(a) You alone are responsible for getting advice about and meeting the requirements of any laws or regulations which apply to exporting or importing any lot prior to bidding. If you are refused a licence or there is a delay in getting one, you must still pay us in full for the lot. We may be able to help you apply for the appropriate licences if you ask us to and pay our fee for doing so. However, we cannot guarantee that you will get one. For more information, please contact Christie's Art Transport Department on +44 (0)20 7839 9060. See the information set out at www.christies.com/ shipping or contact us at arttransport london@

(b) Lots made of protected species

Lots made of or including (regardless of the percentage) endangered and other protected species of wildlife are marked with the symbol ~ in the catalogue. This material includes, among other things, ivory, tortoiseshell, crocodile skin, rhinoceros horn, whalebone, certain species of coral, and Brazilian rosewood. You should check the relevant customs laws and regulations before bidding on any lot containing wildlife material if you plan to import the lot into another country. Several countries refuse to allow you to import property containing these materials, and some other countries require a licence from the relevant regulatory agencies in the countries of exportation as well as importation. In some cases, the lot can only be shipped with an independent scientific confirmation of species and/or age and you will need to obtain these at your own cost. If a lot contains elephant ivory, or any other wildlife material that could be confused with elephant ivory (for example, mammoth ivory, walrus ivory, helmeted hornbill ivory), please see further important information in paragraph (c) if you are proposing to import the lot into the USA. We will not be obliged to cancel your purchase and refund the purchase price if your lot may not be exported, imported or it is seized for any reason by a government authority. It is your responsibility to determine and satisfy the requirements of any applicable laws or regulations relating to the export or import of property containing such protected or regulated material.

(c) US import ban on African elephant ivory The USA prohibits the import of ivory from the African elephant. Any lot containing elephant ivory or other wildlife material that could be easily confused with elephant ivory (for example, mammoth ivory, walrus ivory, helmeted hornbill ivory) can only be imported into the US with results of a rigorous scientific test acceptable to Fish & Wildlife, which confirms that the material is not African elephant ivory. Where we have conducted such rigorous scientific testing on a lot prior to sale, will make this clear in the lot description. In all other cases, we cannot confirm whether a lot contains African elephant ivory, and you will buy that lot at your own risk and be responsible for any scientific test or other reports required for import into the USA at your own cost. If such scientific test is inconclusive or confirms the material is from the African elephant, we will not be obliged to cancel your purchase and refund the purchase price.

Some countries prohibit or restrict the purchase and/ or import of Iranian-origin 'works of conventional craftsmanship' (works that are not by a recognised artist and/or that have a function, for example: bowls, ewers, tiles, ornamental boxes). For example, the USA prohibits the import of this type of property and its purchase by US persons (wherever located) Other countries, such as Canada, only permit the import of this property in certain circumstances. As a convenience to buyers. Christie's indicates under the title of a lot if the lot originates from Iran (Persia). It is your responsibility to ensure you do not bid on or import a lot in contravention of the sanctions or trade embargoes that apply to you.

(e) Gold

Gold of less than 18ct does not qualify in all countries as 'gold' and may be refused import into those countries as 'gold'.

(f) Jewellery over 50 years old

Under current laws, jewellery over 50 years old which is worth £34,300 or more will require an export licence which we can apply for on your behalf. It may take up to eight weeks to obtain the export jewellery licence.

(g) Watches

(i) Many of the watches offered for sale in this catalogue are pictured with straps made of endangered or protected animal materials such as alligator or crocodile. These lots are marked with the symbol ~ in the catalogue. These endangered species straps are shown for display purposes only and are not for sale. Christie's will remove and retain the strap prior to shipment from the sale site. At some sale sites, Christie's may, at its discretion, make the displayed endangered species strap available to the buyer of the lot free of charge if collected in person from the sale site within one year of the date of the sale. Please check with the department for details on a particular lot.

For all symbols and other markings referred to in paragraph H2, please note that lots are marked as a convenience to you, but we do not accept liability for errors or for failing to mark lots.

OUR LIABILITY TO YOU

(a) We give no warranty in relation to any statement made, or information given, by us or our representatives or employees, about any lot other than as set out in the authenticity warranty and, as far as we are allowed by law, all warranties and other terms which may be added to this agreement by law are excluded. The seller's warranties contained in paragraph E1 are their own and we do not have any liability to you in relation to those

- (ii) give any representation, warranty or guarantee or assume any liability of any kind in respect of lot with regard to merchantability, for a particular purpose, description, size, quality, condition, attribution, authenticity, rarity, importance, medium, provenance, exhibition history, literature, or historical relevance. (d) We have no responsibility to any person other than a buyer in connection with the purchase of any lot.
- (e) If, in spite of the terms in paragraphs (a) to (d) or E2(i) above, we are found to be liable to you for any reason, we shall not have to pay more than the purchase price paid by you to us. We will not be responsible to you for any reason for loss of profits or business, loss of opportunity or value, expected savings or interest, costs, damages, or expenses.

OTHER TERMS

OUR ABILITY TO CANCEL

In addition to the other rights of cancellation contained in this agreement, we can cancel a sale of a lot if we reasonably believe that completing the transaction is, or may be, unlawful or that the sale places us or the seller under any liability to anyone else or may damage our reputation.

2 RECORDINGS

We may videotape and record proceedings at any auction. We will keep any personal information confidential, except to the extent disclosure is required by law. However, we may, through this process, use or share these recordings with another Christie's Group company and marketing partners to analyse our customers and to help us to tailor our services for buyers. If you do not want to be videotaped, you may make arrangements to make a telephone or written bid or bid on Christie's LIVETM instead. Unless we agree otherwise in writing, you may not videotape or record proceedings at any auction.

3 COPYRIGHT

We own the copyright in all images, illustrations and written material produced by or for us relating to a lot (including the contents of our catalogues unless otherwise noted in the catalogue). You cannot us them without our prior written permission. We do not offer any guarantee that you will gain any copyright or other reproduction rights to the lot.

ENFORCING THIS AGREEMENT

If a court finds that any part of this agreement is not valid or is illegal or impossible to enforce, that part of the agreement will be treated as being deleted and the rest of this agreement will not be affected.

TRANSFERRING YOUR RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

You may not grant a security over or transfer your rights or responsibilities under these terms on contract of sale with the buyer unless we have given our written permission. This agreement will be binding on your successors or estate and anyone who takes over your rights and responsibilities.

TRANSLATIONS

If we have provided a translation of this agreement, we will use this original version in deciding any issues or disputes which arise under this agreement

PERSONAL INFORMATION

We will hold and process your personal information and may pass it to another Christie's Group company for use as described in, and in line with, our privacy policy at www.christies.com.

8 WAIVER

No failure or delay to exercise any right or remedy provided under these Conditions of Sale shall constitute a waiver of that or any other right or remedy, nor shall it prevent or restrict the further exercise of that or any other right or remedy. No single or partial exercise of such right or remedy shall prevent or restrict the further exercise of that or any other right or remedy.

9 LAW AND DISPUTES

This agreement, and any non-contractual obligations arising out of or in connection with this agreement, or any other rights you may have relating to the purchase of a lot will be governed by the laws of England and Wales. Before we or you start any court proceedings (except in the limited circumstances where the dispute, controversy or claim is related to proceedings brought by someone else and this dispute could be joined to those proceedings), we agree we will each try to settle the dispute by mediation following the Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution (CEDR) Model Mediation Procedure. We will use a mediator affiliated with CEDR who we and you agree to. If the dispute is not settled by mediation, you agree for our benefit that the dispute will be referred to and dealt with exclusively in the courts of England and Wales. However, we will have the right to bring proceedings against you in any

IMPORTANT NOTICES AND EXPLANATION OF CATALOGUING PRACTICE

CHRISTIE'S INTEREST IN PROPERTY CONSIGNED FOR AUCTION

Δ Property Owned in part or in full by Christie's

From time to time, Christie's may offer a lot which it owns in whole or in part. Such property is identified in the catalogue with the symbol Δ next to its lot number.

o Minimum Price Guarantees

On occasion, Christie's has a direct financial interest in the outcome of the sale of certain lots consigned for sale. This will usually be where it has guaranteed to the Seller that whatever the outcome of the auction, the Seller will receive a minimum sale price for the work. This is known as a minimum price guarantee. Where Christie's holds such financial interest we identify such lots with the symbol ° next to the lot number.

°♦ Third Party Guarantees/Irrevocable bids

Where Christie's has provided a Minimum Price Guarantee it is at risk of making a loss, which can be significant, if the lot fails to sell. Christie's therefore sometimes chooses to share that risk with a third party. In such cases the third party agrees prior to the auction to place an irrevocable written bid on the lot. The third party is therefore committed to bidding on the lot and, even if there are no other bids, buying the lot at the level of the written bid unless there are any higher bids. In doing so, the third party takes on all or part of the risk of the lot not being sold. If the lot is not sold, the third party may incur a loss. Lots which are subject to a third party guarantee arrangement are identified in the catalogue with the symbol $^{\circ} \blacklozenge$.

The third party will be remunerated in exchange for accepting this risk based on a fixed fee if the third party is the successful bidder or on the final hammer price in the event that the third party is not the successful bidder. The third party may also bid for the lot above the written bid. Where it does so, and is the successful bidder, the fixed fee for taking on the guarantee risk may be netted against the final purchase price.

Third party guarantors are required by us to disclose to anyone they are advising their financial interest in any lots they are guaranteeing. However, for the avoidance of any doubt, if you are advised by or bidding through an agent on a lot identified as being subject to a third party guarantee you should always ask your agent to confirm whether or not he or she has a financial interest in relation to the lot.

Other Arrangements

Christie's may enter into other arrangements not involving bids. These include arrangements where Christie's has given the Seller an Advance on the proceeds of sale of the lot or where Christie's has shared the risk of a guarantee with a partner without the partner being required to place an irrevocable written bid or otherwise participating in the bidding on the lot. Because such arrangements are unrelated to the bidding process they are not marked with a symbol in the catalogue.

Bidding by parties with an interest

In any case where a party has a financial interest in a lot and intends to bid on it we will make a saleroom announcement to ensure that all bidders are aware of this. Such financial interests can include where beneficiaries of an Estate have reserved the right to bid on a lot consigned by the Estate or where a partner in a risk-sharing arrangement has reserved the right to bid on a lot and/or notified us of their intention to bid.

Please see http://www.christies.com/ financial-interest/ for a more detailed explanation of minimum price guarantees and third party financing arrangements.

Where Christie's has an ownership or financial interest in every lot in the catalogue, Christie's will not designate each lot with a symbol, but will state its interest in the front of the catalogue.

POST 1950 FURNITURE

All items of post-1950 furniture included in this sale are items either not originally supplied for use in a private home or now offered solely as works of art. Accordingly, these items should not be used as furniture in your home in their current condition. If you do intend to use such items for this purpose, you must first ensure that they are reupholstered, restuffed and/or recovered (as appropriate) in order that they comply with the provisions of the Regulations.

London, 1735

In Christie's opinion either made in the workshop of the master or struck with his sponsor's mark prior to retailing and hallmarked at the London Assay Office between May 29, 1735 and May 29, 1736. The date letter has usually, but not always, changed since the early 18th century on, or around, May 29. Prior to the 18th century, the date letter changed on various dates ranging from May 8 to August 3. Since 1975, the date letter has run from January 2 to January 1 of the subsequent year. Other countries and English, Irish and Scottish provincial offices have varying dating systems.

A GEORGE II SILVER CUP AND COVER

circa 1735

In Christie's opinion made during the specified monarch's reign and unmarked or struck with illegible marks.

A GEORGE II SILVER CUP AND COVER

In Christie's opinion made during the specified monarch's reign and, in all probability, in the workshop of, or sponsored by, the maker cited, but with marks transposed from a previously hallmarked object. Where applicable the catalogue will note that these transposed hallmarks have been cancelled to bring them into conformity with modern English hallmarking laws.
