

Oldonyo Laro is located within a Private Sanctuary in Kenya, and is reached by the Estates helicopter or planes from Nairobi. Oldonyo Laro is only available on an exclusive and limited basis, it is ideal for those in search of privacy and seclusion.

Oldonyo Laro remains a private home and was created by Danish entrepreneur and philanthropist Jan Bonde Nielsen with design inspired by the late architect Arne Hasselqvist who designed many of the most beautiful homes in Mustique. Since then Peter Bonde Nielsen has taken over from his father and looks after all the activities in and around the estate.

With sweeping views of the Rift Valley, the unique and luxurious accommodation is built on raised platforms under thatched roofs with walls made from traditional canvas and sleeps between 14 and 18 people.

Oldonyo Laro provides an unprecedented degree of flexibility. Use the home as your base from which to explore Kenya, be it fly fishing in the crystal clear waters of Mount Kenya, horse riding in the Chyulu Hills or over night in the secluded mountain cabin. For those seeking The Big Five, the Oldonyo Laro experience also includes a luxury mobile camp which can be set up in any location in Kenya.

All auction proceeds will go directly to benefit the Enterprise and Conservation Society, which donates to two sectors essentially. Firstly, Lorika which amongst others employ teachers, pays bursaries for over 150 children for education and also does business training for illiterate adults and teenagers to give them the chance to raise their standard of living by borrowing money from the Micro-Finance arm of the organisation.

The second element is Resource Protection, which employs 70 rangers to safeguard not only the Sanctuary fauna, flora and wildlife but also endeavours to provide the same protection and security in surrounding forests and communities. A very large portion of the rangers work lies in building relations with communities in order to build trust and understanding and through that be better able to carry out their work.
