“The market's appetite for rare wines of excellent provenance continues to be unabated. Buyers from around the world again set their eyes and ears on Los Angeles which continues to prove itself a strong center for the purchase of the world's finest and rarest wines. Bordeaux is back in the front seat with our top lots not dominated by Burgundy. Claret, often the cornerstone of the auction market, garnered much attention, with fierce bidding for pristine lots of all formats and sizes, especially for the 1996 and 1986 vintages. Top flight Burgundies of excellent condition and provenance, however, had their audience and they continue to demand the very best prices for the world's rarest vintages and formats. Christie's Los Angeles looks forward to a full Fall wine schedule that will bring some of the world's best collections to one of the company's finest salerooms,” said Scott Torrence, Head of Wine Sales, Christie's Los Angeles
