“Today’s results soared far above our most optimistic expectations and exceeded its pre-sale estimate by nearly 20%,” said G. Max Bernheimer, International Head of Christie's Antiquities Department. “Bidding was intense and very competitive and came from all four corners of the globe.” “Phenomenal prices were achieved in all segments of the market, from Egyptian and Near Eastern objects to Greek and Roman works of art, and the sale was highlighted by the sublime Roman bronze head of a man which realized $992,000, more than tripling its pre-sale estimate” added Molly Morse Limmer, Head of Sale and today’s auctioneer.
