Georgiana Aitken, Head of Department, and Laetitia Delaloye, Head of Sale: "The result of the inaugural Antiquities sale at King Street demonstrates the continued strength of the London market for pieces with excellent provenance and Christie's leadership within the field. There was fierce competition across all categories from private collectors, trade and institutions. We are very pleased with the result for the exceptional Cycladic marble figure which fetched £216,000, doubling its pre-sale estimate. The highlight of the sale was the Roman marble torso of an athlete, formerly in the collection of Yves Saint Laurent, which sold for £962,500, having been widely admired during the view. We look forward to continued success at the Antiquities sale in New York on 13 December 2013."
