G. Max Bernheimer, International Department Head and Molly Morse Limmer, Head of Antiquities, New York, commented, "Participation in the Antiquities sales was truly international with buyers from across the globe vying for the rarest and most significant works. The strong results from this sale confirm that works from all sectors of the market continue to perform well and that Christie's remains the world's leading venue for ancient art at auction. We are particularly pleased with the Cycladic marbles which led the sale. The top lot, the Cycladic Marble Head Early Spedos Variety, saw fierce bidding in the room and online realizing $485,000, nearly double its high estimate - further underscoring the continued demand for the highest quality works of antiquity. We look forward with great anticipation to the sale of the Northampton Egyptian limestone figure of Sekhemka, to be auctioned in London on July 10 as part of the Exceptional Sale."
